Indescribable magic happens when milk meets cereal, booty meets couch cushions, and a child's eyes meet cartoons. No doubt the pinnacle of every kid's week, cartoons offer an animated escape into a limitless world. Cartoons free our imaginations, bending the realms of possibility in the exact ways that are forbidden and restricted in our mortal world. But beyond the entrancing animation styles, squeaky voices, and reoccurring characters are underlying themes that greatly benefit our lives. We see our favorite characters struggle, and share in their triumph when they overcome. We relate to them as children, and remember them fondly when we reminisce as adults. Yet, no matter how long it's been, or how vehemently you tried to convince your friends that you "only watched it once," your favorite cartoons will always be very special to you. Some of them teach us about love, others teach us about acceptance, but the most memorable, remarkable, and beneficial ones teach us how to be fearless leaders. Here are the 15 best animated advocates of awareness, in no particular order. Tommy Pickles Though I'll admit I'm not the biggest Rugrats fan, Thomas Malcolm Pickles can't be left off this list. Though he and his diaper dandies are regularly stuck in a "pickle" as a result of Angelica's evil schemes, Tommy always puts the safety of his people over the need of his nap. In the many ways Tommy teaches us to lead, none is more strong than his adventure-seeking, positive, proactive attitude towards his associates and younger brother, Dil Pickles. [Best leader trait: Empathy] Arnold The only character with an purposefully unknown last name to make the list, Arnold is perhaps the strongest leader to emerge from Nickelodeon in the '90s. Revered by nearly everyone, Arnold is always looked to for advice, moral help, and to pinch hit against the fifth graders in the vacant lot. His odd head shape is more than a funny reference and catchy tag line. It also serves as a efficient command center to house his idealist perspectives, his many dreams, and everyone else's best interest. An interesting factoid is that Arnold didn't start his acting career in animation, but in clay. [Best leader trait: Optimism] ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ Porkchop Before Brian in Family Guy, Goddard in Jimmy Neutron, or Santa's Little Helper in The Simpsons, there was Porkchop, Doug Funny's nearly-human canine sidekick. Although he does not talk, Porkchop displays his leadership abilities through an elaborate system of gestures, cute facial expressions, and words if he can find the appropriate writing tools. With sincerity and near telekinesis, Porkchop alleviates most of Doug's frustrations quickly, effectively, and mindfully. This dog certainly raises the bar for any other animated faithful four-legged companion. [Best leader trait: Accountability] Eliza Thornberry To rival Mr. Pickles above, Eliza's yearning for constant adventure often places her and her loved ones in danger, but she always seems to manage. Gifted with the ability to talk to animals thanks to a African mountain shaman at age 10 (great parenting there, Nigel), her knowledge and ability to predict what animals can do often plays to her advantage. Her intrigue frequently gets her into trouble with predatory animals, but she's no doubt one of the most fearless 12-year-old characters to grace the tube. [Best leader trait: Awareness] Regina "Reggie" Rocket Big sister to the legendary Oswald (Otto) Rocket, this purple-haired speed machine grinded and kickflipped her way past almost every extreme sports gender gap. She often acted as the voice of reason for her friends, and refused to be silenced in the media by teaming up with Squid to make "The Zine." Reggie's can-do attitude often saves the gang from losing in a last second game against Larz and his cronies. [Best leader trait: Ambition] ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ Wanda Wanda Venus Fairyrinkle-Cosma, whose name is too fun not to note, is by actual age and practical wisdom the most mature on this list. Even though she's constantly bombarded by the idiotic wish granting of Cosmo and Timmy's nimrod antics, she remains level-headed and always manages to save her fairy godson from danger, her husband from himself, and the day all at the same time. Her deep intelligence is often mistaken for senseless nagging. [Best leader trait: Patience] Sandra "Sandy" Cheeks Sandy is the only character in Spongebob Squarepants that humans can relate to on the basis of oxygen-reliant. This karate kickin', science lovin', ultra friendly Texas native exemplifies perhaps the most important characteristic of leadership: fortitude. Whenever Spongebob, Patrick, or any of the other semi-relevant aquatic residents of Bikini Bottom are in trouble or feeling down, Sandy always seems to be the first on the scene with encouraging, progressive, high-ya! plans of action. [Best leader trait: Strength] Eddy In this instance, the negative sounding adjectives that describe this money grabber outweigh most of the more pleasant ones. Eddy is thought of as selfish, overambitious, power hungry, greedy, a loud mouth, and jealous, but do these not perfectly describe some of the best leaders of our time? No matter how you feel about Eddy personally, he's one of the first toons on this list that I would call if I were starting a company. No matter how often he's shut down, deterred, or falls short of getting a quarter (and, in turn, a jawbreaker), he's always back in the next 15 minute segment with another harebrained scheme. [Best leader trait: Tenacity] Velma Dinkley No doubt a genius in every sense of the word, Velma is the unspoken and unrecognized hero resulting in much of the "gang's" success. If you'll take notice, she often has a pre-instilled sense of pride and certainty before they pull the mask off the bad guy at the very end. She's also extremely well-versed in Morse Code and martial arts, two impractical daily skills that seem to come in handy at the right moments. [Best leader trait: Intuition] ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ Theodore Jasper "T.J." Detweiler Nothing "whomps" about this kid as a bold and brave ring leader. With a sweetness and sincerity that only a mother could love, T.J is often the voice of the voiceless when his friends are in danger, and treats each child of the playground with unfiltered equality. Far from an 'A' student, his intelligence and know-how is unquestionable. One is left to wonder if he'd be more like Gretchen if he gave an honest effort in his academics. Either way, this red-hat-flipped-backwards playground deviant is fit to lead, so move aside King Bob. [Best leader trait: Brevity] Jimmy Neutron It's pretty common that Jimmy's big brain gets him, and the rest of Retroville, in serious trouble. This normally requires Jimmy to invent something else to fix the trouble he caused in the first place. He's not very well-liked by anyone, really, with the exception of his parents, and his socially outcast buddies, Sheen and Carl. But no matter his adversities, Jimmy always finds the brain and willpower necessary to keep inventing, producing, and testing his limits. [Best leader trait: Courage] Brain Say this with me: "megalomaniac mouse." Isn't that fun? Brain's character can be compared to a coconut. Behind his hard, tough exterior of rudeness, short temperament, anger, and sarcasm beats a sensitive heart that truly cares about the world he so desperately tries to take over. Based of the legendary Orson Welles, Brain exhibits leadership qualities bountifully, but none are stronger than his ability to tolerate Pinky and all of his redundant questions. {Best leader trait: Tolerance} ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ Courage At first glance, this snaggletoothed dog's name may seem ill-fitting, but as each episode plays out viewers can tell he fits his title. Abandoned as a puppy, Courage is easily frightened and quick to hide when monsters and ghouls show up to greet him, Muriel, and Eustace on the farm. His instinctual fortitude kicks into overdrive upon the realization that his masters (friends) truly are in trouble, particularly Muriel. Though he's usually at odds, this pup does not allow his shortcomings to stop him from doing whatever is necessary to keep his friends safe. [Best leader trait: Selflessness] Max Goof Anyone who personally knows me and my love for cartoons is not surprised by this pick. Playing majorly off The Goofy Movie, Max's story of love and constant disparity is relatable to everyone. He goes to drastic measures to please his friends and impress Roxanne at the assembly, and his display of tireless refusal to back down in the face of adversity is inspiring. Though he stretches the truth by telling Roxanne he's going to the Powerline concert instead of on an around the country road trip with Goofy, it ends up playing to his favor in his never-ending struggle to do the right thing. [Best leader trait: Poise] Dexter Known for his intelligence, Dexter fears no risk. Despite his projects often backfiring because he's either overanxious or overconfident, Dexter is highly skilled at using quick reflexes and problem solving to get the job done. Even though his clueless parents are obviously American, he speaks with a distinct Russian accent which makes me believe that there's more of an "off screen" life of his that the viewers know nothing about (my wager is on spy). Regardless, Dexter always has his hands in projects and is determined to invent the next useful thing. [Best leader trait: Focus] Tito Makani As the ancient Hawaiians say, "The most important races are won in the ocean of the soul." An endless source of baffling, meaningful quotes like these, Tito is the fry flingin' burger bandit who runs the Shore Shack with Ray(mundo). He's always quick to offer the kids "useful" advice and is very eager to listen and help everyone he comes across. His teddy bear-like stature makes him easily approachable, and rumor has it that his burgers are worth missing the incoming swells. [Best leader trait: Compassion] ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ ♫ Scroll down to continue reading article ♫ It was tough to narrow it down to 15, as there were a lot of solid characters that lead me through my childhood. I'm curious to hear what you think. Who did I miss? Featured photo credit: Cartoon Collage/@WeAre90sKids via twitter.com
